Achieving Competence

In this space, groceries are a mission to pursue larger goals

Family goals

E.g. giving the best to my children

Matahari, 28, Married with Kids, Homemaker

"I shop at 5 different stores in pursuit of value & quality so I can provide the most nutritious meals for my family"

Personal goals

E.g. staying healthy

Darla, 30, Single, Staff
at Foreign Government

"I'm always busy with work but I also maintain a healthy lifestyle. I'm particular with the goods I consume, especially for healthy products."

Financial goals

E.g. mortgage, investment...

Greg, 38, Married without Kids, Civil Servant

"I'm strict with GS because we want to make sure all expenses are justified. We want to buy another house, so we need to evaluate our expenses each year."

To achieve this mission, consumers need to be groceries masters

Smart, savvy, agile and knowledgeable enough to:

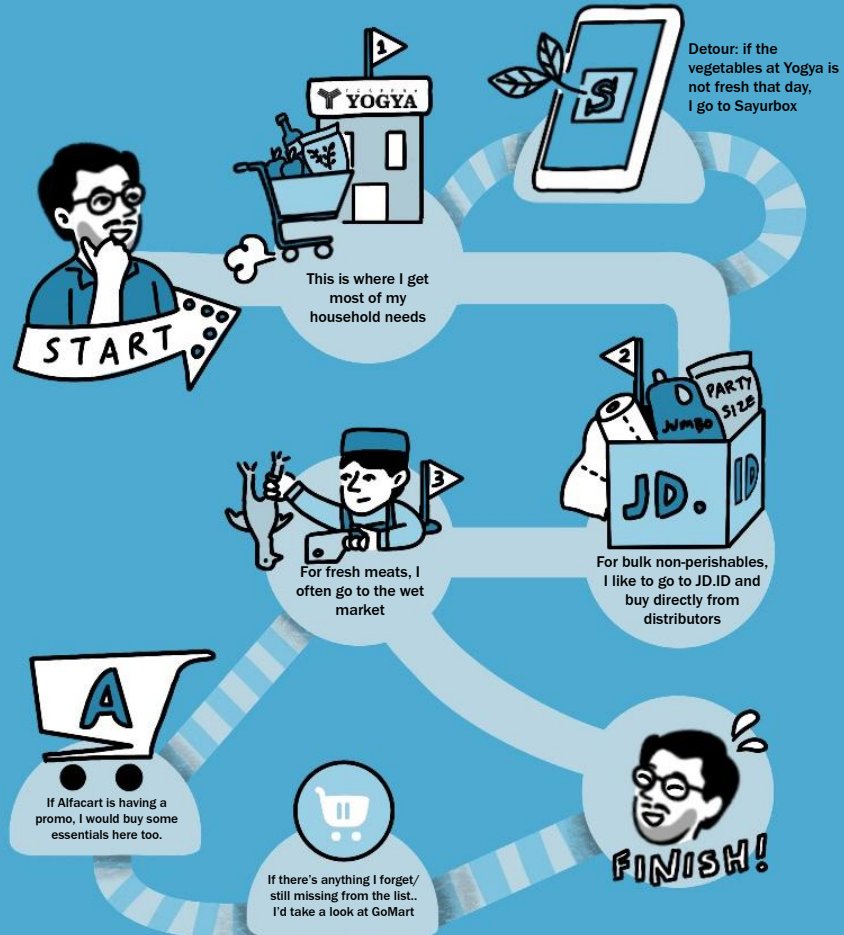

Build the perfect shopping plan and execute it expertly

Know where & how to get the right brands & most suitable products

Find the best value

Not miss out on any offers

The role of the grocery shopping platform/store is to enable them to be this master

Achieving competence means winning at groceries (and at life!)

A very similar emotional pay-off to Gojek's 'Hack Life'

That deeply satisfying and proud feeling of using the tools & options you have in the smartest way, finding workarounds through inefficiencies

Getting the best product, from the right merchant, at the best price

E.g. Greg's complex grocery shopping plan: so satisfying when it's completed well & without a glitch

We see 3 ways GoMart can enable consumers to be groceries masters

1

GoMart as Reliable

2

GoMart as Advanced

3

GoMart as Effective

Reliable

GoMart, nailing your groceries

To shop competently, consumers need THE store/platform: the one that is right for them, on which they can always count

Think: Michael Jordan and his Air Jordan, A maestro's stradivarius, A chef's knife collection

Meet Kimmy, a mum with high standards for groceries

She is always looking out for new stores/platforms that will best meet her needs

"I'm in an all-mums WhatsApp group where we share knowledge on parenting, especially on food & nutrition. As mums, we need to update ourselves on what are the best ways to provide nourishment for the family, including the best apps to get groceries."

But grocery shopping platforms are not fully dependable

E.g. Misleading promos, inaccurate inventory, order errors, inconsistent product quality, unreliable delivery time/fees, lack of accountability

She knows that each store/platform has its own shortcomings so she combines them to get the best out of each

“When I buy fruits & veggies, I use Sayurbox. But when it comes to buying fresh fish, I go to SuperIndo: they have a live fish tank where you can just see for yourself: what fish are in stock? Which ones are fresh? That way, you can be assured that you’ll get the best quality”

Insight

When I'm shopping for groceries, I need tools I can rely on to plan & execute perfectly

However, my experience with groceries platforms/stores is inconsistent, there are always shortcomings

Advanced

GoMart, groceries done exactly my way

To shop competently,
consumers need a platform that matches their level of skills & expertise

Think: A professional financial planning tool, A sophisticated software

Meet Matahari, a particular & expert consumer

She knows exactly where and how to get the right products with the right quality, for the right price

“For chicken, I like going to the wet market because not only that it’s fresh, but I can be very specific: I can choose the size, maturity, and request the ways the chicken is cleaned and cut.

Moreover, I can bargain directly with the seller.

But grocery shopping platforms are too basic & rigid

E.g. Limited searching & comparative tools, Rigidity of process, Special requests not always possible, Unavailable merchants/items/delivery slots

For these highly specific items, Matahari still believes that going to the store/market herself is the way to go

“For fresh items especially, I still prefer going to the store myself.

I can actually see the product, compare & contrast, evaluate.. And end up with the exact one I want. Something that’s still tough to do online, or to be done by someone else”

Insight

When I'm doing groceries, I'm very particular about getting the exact product I need at the right price

However, shopping platforms are not as advanced as I am

Proposition & Benefit

Effective

GoMart, helping you shop in a breeze

To shop competently, consumers need to be able to execute their plan quickly & effectively

Think: An F1 racer pit team, changing tires at the speed of light

Meet Greg, a diligent husband and an efficient grocery customer

He and his wife plan their grocery trips expertly and in great detail in order to complete them swiftly

"I plan in great detail to make my shopping more efficient once I'm at the store. I organize my shopping list in an excel sheet by category, product, brand of choice, substitution options, and store alternatives. It help me ensure I get everything I need.. and even when its not available, there's a fallback plan I can refer to quickly"

But groceries platforms don't help streamline the process

E.g. Several stops needed, intricate searching & evaluation process, lack of service, need to write comprehensive notes, constant monitoring of drivers

However, no matter how meticulously efficient Greg's planning is, execution is flawed due to platforms/stores' ineffectiveness

Category	Item	Brand ★	Substitute	Substitute	Store ★	Store B	Store C
Pantry Essentials	White Rice, 5 kg	Golden Farmer	Java's Best	Pandan Wangi	Yogya	Super Indo	Tokopedia
	Sweet Soy Sauce, 2l	Bango	ABC	Indofood	Yogya	Alfacart
Fresh Vegetables/ Fruits	Spinach, 200 gr	Organic	Hydroponic	Non-Organic	Sayurbox	Tokopedia	Yogya
	Strawberries	Organic	Local	Imported	Sayurbox	Yogya

"The way I organize the categories in the excel sheet is based on what makes sense for me. Essential items like rice is on top of the list, for example."

"Yet in reality, the aisles at the Yogya is not organized in this order. Often, I have to refer back and forth to the list, or physically go back to the first aisle if I miss anything."

Insight

When I shop for groceries, I plan perfectly so I don't waste time & effort when I get there

But stores/platforms are messy and unintuitive, they don't streamline the process

Introducing:

Our Value Proposition Framework

Workshop Exercises

Run through the different exercise templates

Group exercise 1

(Time: 40 mins)

First, let's think about how our Value Proposition delivers to users needs across different occasions

You will get 4 different scenarios:

- Weekly essentials
- Weekly restock
- Bi-weekly restock
- Monthly purchase

Based on each scenario, follow the template to identify how your value proposition can solve consumers tensions & meet their needs

The goal of this exercise is to understand how our proposition can deliver to each groceries occasion at large

Example: Advanced

Grocery shopping occasion: Bi-weekly Restock

What is happening in this situation and what does our consumer need?

Riri lives with her parents and siblings. The family splits groceries duties and each member of the family is responsible for specific items. Riri needs to take care of pantry items, drinks, snacks, cleaning supplies, frozen food.

She would usually shop monthly after payday but she needs to do another run bi-weekly for frozen food specifically.

What she needs in these moments:

- To find the best price & right promos on items requested by her mum so she doesn't overspend
- To ensure the cold chain has been fully respected and items are in perfect condition when they reach her freezer

How can GoMart make our consumer a more competent grocery shopper in this situation by being [eg. ADVANCED] ?

GoMart allows Riri to [What GoMart offers: identify the cheapest option for specific products and promotions related to that product across a wide variety of merchants with comparison tools, access real pictures & extensive details of the items in her cart, have the shopper make sure it's in perfect condition, right size, colour etc.]

Without [Tension: having to spend time & effort looking at different platforms & stores, missing out on an offer, being unsure whether her frozen purchases will be in perfect condition]

So she can [Benefit: be confident that the items she purchased are the right ones, at the right price, in the right condition]

Grocery shopping occasion: Weekly Essentials

What is happening in this situation and what does our consumer need?

Darla is a busy woman. She lives alone and doesn't cook much, so her grocery shopping consists in grabbing a few essentials weekly.

What she needs in these moments:

- To make sure that her favorite snacks brand & variant are available
- To find the few items she is looking for quickly and on 1 platform/store
- To avoid extra fees (ie. delivery) as it is a small purchase (not worth it)

How can GoMart make our consumer a more competent grocery shopper in this situation by being [SPACE] ?

GoMart allows Darla to [what GoMart offers]

Without [tension]

So she can [benefit]

Grocery shopping occasion: Weekly Restock

Group exercise 2

(Time: 40 mins)

Now, let's look at the 3 pillars of our Value Proposition

From a Product perspective, what is required for GoMart to deliver on each of these pillars?

- How might our drivers deliver to this?
- How might our shoppers deliver to this?
- How might our product features/UX deliver to this?
- How might our non-product initiatives (promos, activations, partnerships) deliver to this?

The goal of this exercise is to understand how well we can deliver this Proposition

Feel free to tweak your 3 pillars if needed!

EXAMPLE: Effective
